

Last-second adjustment and the entry is ready to compete.

The morning air at San Francisco's Lake Merced fills with the thunderous throb of high-powered engines and, in the North Lake area, the eye catches the trim lines of surging ships sweeping under full throttle through the water's calm.

But wait!

They aren't full-size, these beautifully-produced craft, but individual hand-made creations (seldom more than 75 inches in length), participating in the sectional competition of the San Francisco Model Yacht Club.

From throughout the state entrants come, bringing with them their own interpretation of the two classes, hydro (pontoon plus hull) and monoplane (single hull), to tune and polish and prepare before launching onto the 700-yard course.

They race only for silver and gold cups, but with each entry is a pride of perfection which, in terms of dollars, can go beyond several thousands in investment.

The competition, begun in 1901 with sailing craft only, has swung slowly to the power-crafts favored mostly by the younger enthusiasts while the older's preference still is for the sedate speed of a sailing ship.

It is, however, the power which makes this event the finest and fastest in California, with over 100 entries of gasoline-operated, remote-controlled yachts in each speed competition.

Their lines and times will improve as years pass, yet in the thrill of speed and labor of creation, these enthusiasts fulfill a part of themselves and give to onlookers that same excitement as they race in miniature the ships of their dreams.

Father and sons concentrate on tuning up their entry.

A part of the crowd which gathered to watch the event.

Two participants make final adjustments before launch.

Tony Chiboucas controls his $2000 entry while son Chuck and friend hold the craft before time trials.

An entry comes in under remote-control as a crew member stands ready to retrieve it.

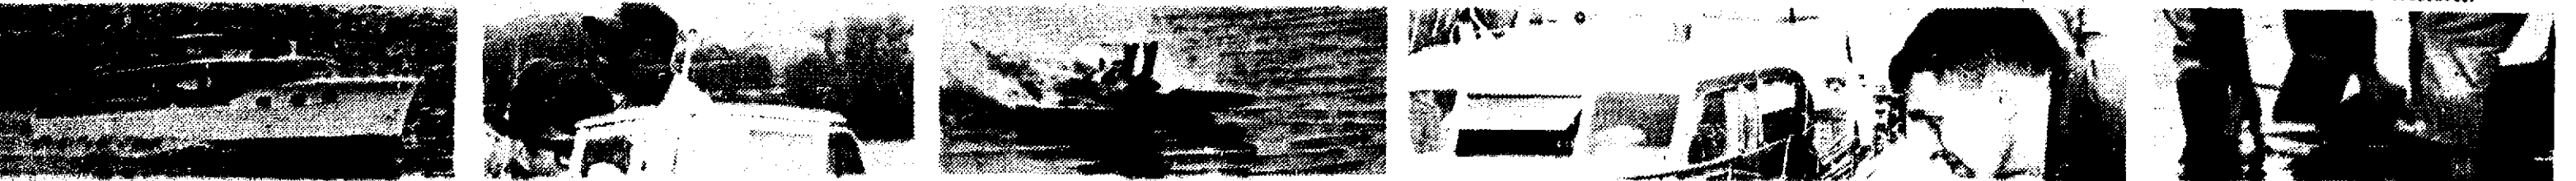

Jim Woodlatch, of Los Angeles' Modeleers Club, holds his boat, Sidewinder, while awaiting turn to launch.

Life In Arkansas

By TOMMY YATES
Associated Press Writer

Mrs. Irene Hartley, who lives near Conway, could be considered a self-styled psychiatrist, adventurer, dreamer, or maybe a little of each rolled into her 71 years of age.

She lives in a neat little house at Vilonia where for 17 years she has been exchanging letters with a pen pal at Cane Hill (Washington County).

She said she and Mrs. Ruby Weems, 69, had written each other about once a week before they finally met for the first time about two weeks ago at Vilonia.

"You know, she was just as sweet as I always thought she would be," Mrs. Hartley said. "I wish we could have gotten together sooner but we both had a lot to do and I don't have a way to go unless someone carries me."

Mrs. Hartley said they hadn't been able to talk to each other because she didn't have a telephone until recently.

Mrs. Hartley, who said their letter exchange began when Mrs. Weems saw her name in the Arkansas Farmer magazine requesting an exchange of flowers and ideas, said that when they met they just talked about ordinary things.

"We mostly just stayed home," Mrs. Hartley said, "but we did go into Conway one day and did a little window-shopping."

She said they had a lot in common. She told the Conway Log Cabin Democrat that "in addition to having our flowers in common, we are both Missionary Baptists."

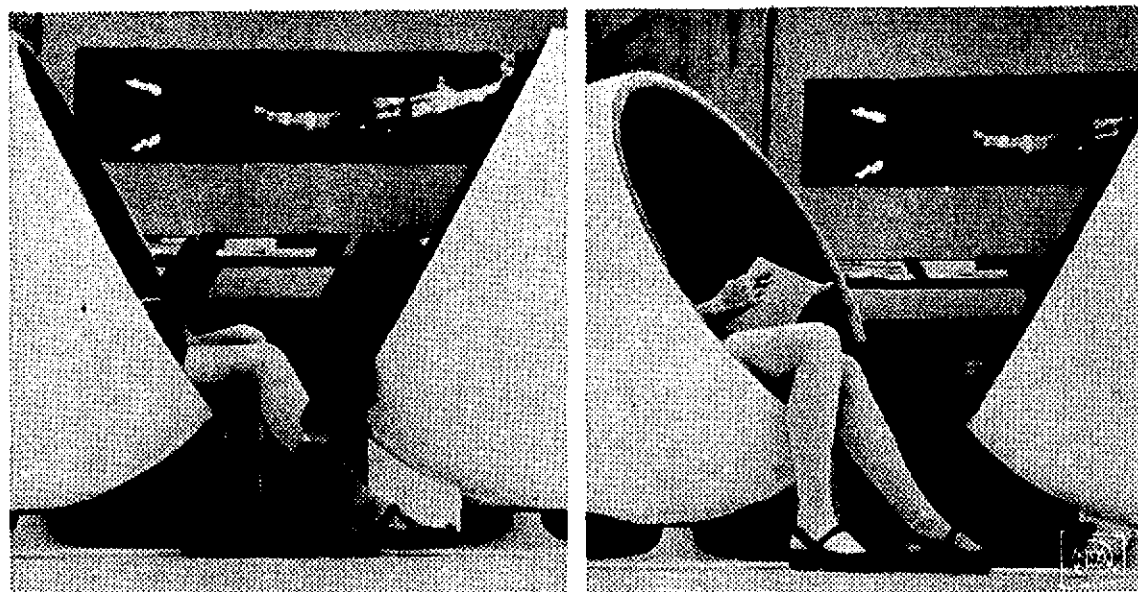

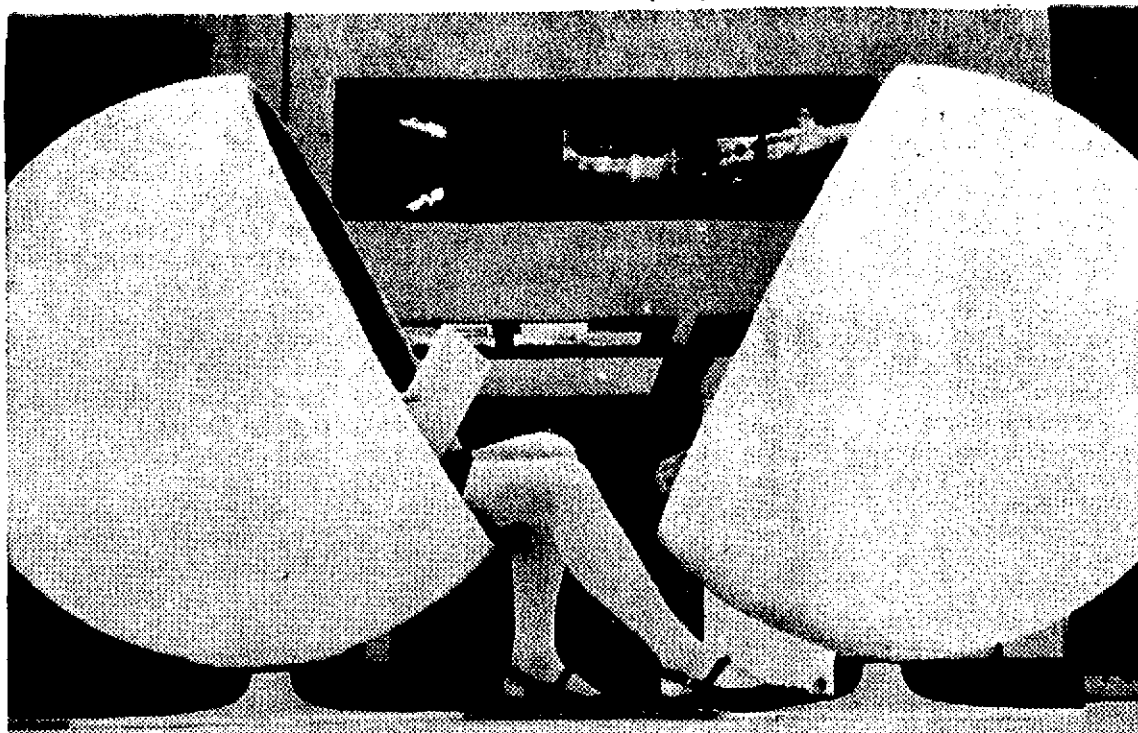

Mrs. Hartley said she had been exchanging letters with persons since 1941, and now has pen pals in Africa, Germany and Paris.

"In my way of thinking," she said, "it's worthwhile to write letters."

"You know you can tell a lot about a person just by reading his letters," she said. "You can picture most of them through their letters and I love some of them like they were my own folks."

Both Mrs. Hartley and Mrs. Weems are widows and Mrs. Hartley said that "our letter writing has given both of us a lot of company."

"I hope to go visit her within a month or so," she said.

ONE THING ABOUT some of the new modern furniture, it's entirely functional. Take a bashful boy and girl at a library in London, put them in two cubiclelike chairs facing each other, and—voilà!—they're acquainted, as simple as one, two, three as shown in the above sequence of photographs.

Television and Radio

By BOB CRANE
For Cynthia Lowry
HOLLYWOOD (AP)

There's an actor in town who always demands a studio dressing room fully furnished with gym equipment, a steam bath and a sauna bath. And another who moves his pool table into every dressing room assigned to him.

I'm different. In my dressing room I only have a full set of drums augmented by a complete hi-fi outfit boasting the biggest set of speakers this side of the Hollywood Bowl. When visitors to the "Hogan's Heroes" stages comment that my quarters are loud, they're not talking about the wallpaper or draperies.

This love of drumming isn't new. It's been with me ever since I saw Gene Krupa's band at the New York World's Fair in 1939. I wasn't yet in my teens, but I knew then that I just had to be a drummer with a big band.

I honestly feel I would have pursued a career in music except for the fact that the decisive point in my life occurred at about the same time of great days of the big dance bands ended, at the end of World War II.

Funny thing, but I'd never have ventured into radio except that it was a job that would keep me close to music. During the 10-year span of my early-morning radio show in Hollywood, I kept a drum and cymbal at my bedside and constantly drummed accompaniment to the records I played.

During 16 years in radio, I never gave up my drumming ambitions. As recently as six years ago I was taking penny ante jobs with a band I had formed, even though at the time I was making $75,000 a year from my radio work.

At the studio, the time spent between scenes waiting for cameras and lights to be moved and adjusted can be a bore if you don't have some sort of a hobby to pass the time. Mine is retiring to my dressing room to "sit in" vicariously on recorded numbers with the orchestras of Count Basie, Woody Herman and Henry Mancini.

During the first year of filming the series, I was so involved with developing the character of Hogan that I didn't have time to relax between scenes. But as we began the second season I knew it was time to get out the old drums and records again.

The crew quickly grew accustomed to the frenetic sounds coming from my dressing room on the Desilu Gower lot. This season we have moved to Desilu Cahuenga, a move many people think was forced by my drumming. The boss lady of the place, Lucy Ball, and her husband, Gary Morton, were always dropping by my dressing room to request numbers.

Or was it only Gary? As I recall, Lucy would just stand there, fastening on that football helmet, after pulling on her ear muffs, after screwing in her ear plugs.

Was she trying to tell me something?

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

THOUGHTLESS ADULTS MAKE TEEN THINK

Dear Helen: Recently our hospital put on a fair. Part of the entertainment was a "battle of the bands," with a prize going to the best.

Approximately 20 groups competed.

The judges were supposedly educated in the musical field. All through the show they gave each contestant their full attention. My brother's band was last. At the time they were announced, the three judges stood up and held a conference, which was going on after the boys started to play. Then one judge walked away. In the middle of the first number, another judge left the auditorium. You can imagine the dismay of this group and its singer at having only one judge left, and he was too busy writing to hear them. The other two judges came back at the end of the last selection. This was very noticeable to the crowd, as they had to walk in front of the performers.

My brother's band got very big applause in spite of this. Needless to say, it did not win. It was not losing that bothered the kids — it was the consideration of the adults who walked away.

Before grown-ups put teens down for being rude and thoughtless, they should look to themselves. Right, Helen? — DISGUSTED

Dear Dis: Right I—H.

Dear Helen: You said it is best to wear good old skin in the summer months, instead of nylons. We agree, but our school passed a rule that you have to wear nylons or some form of socks, even with sandals. Nobody would be caught dead in bobby socks, so what have we got left for next fall? — UNCOMFORTABLE

Dear Un: How about foot-liners (which don't show above the shoe?) And if your school won't allow these, it's much to picky.

Dear Helen: I have a very good friend who had a baby out of wedlock. Now she is planning to be married and she wants a long, white gown and a full church wedding.

I go along with the church wedding, but wouldn't it be more appropriate to be married in a street length pastel dress, and have only one or two attendants? — ONE WHO CARES

Dear One: Aren't you trying to punish your friend for a past that should be forgotten?

The only symbols of virginity at a wedding are the veil, orange blossoms and myrtle, which she should omit. White does not signify purity. All it meant for centuries was that the bride was too poor to bring a dowry. — H

Dear Helen: I am a girl of 15. I always was too fat and was mocked out because of it. Well, a year ago I decided to go on a diet, and lost about 60 pounds. I am short and have a small frame.

I now weigh 95 pounds and everybody tells me I'm to skinny. How can I please this world? — TWIGGY 2

Dear T-2: Why try? If you're healthy and happy at 95 pounds — and you're somewhat more "leaved out" than The Twig — forget the worriers. But get back to well-balanced meals that build up but don't round out.

'Teen-Age' Words Barely Make Talk

DETROIT (AP) — Bring your bod over tomorrow and we'll hop in my pig, catch the rays and have a boss time.

If that makes sense to you, then you're hip (which is an outdated word) to the latest in teen-age talk, which they call slangulate.

The bod is the body—yourself; the pig is a car that looks powerful but has a small engine; catching the rays is getting a suntan; and boss is the same as great.

A Detroit News survey of teen-age talk uncovered these gems, and more.

For example: "I'm weak means I'm shocked; bag it means forget it; freak means fine; jacked up means ruined; just can't cut it means just can't bear it."

If you're in your pig and you hang a Louie, you've just turned left, man. If you hang a Ralph, it's a right turn, hang a Sam is go straight and hang a Ulysses means make a U-turn.

If you understand it all, then you're groovy—which is what cool and neat used to mean.

SHOWBEAT

Mideast Accord Is Sharif's Hope

By DICK KLEINER
Hollywood Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

You don't find too many westerns with an Egyptian heavy and a Swedish leading lady, but that's one of the claims to fame for "Mackenna's Gold." Omar Sharif is the villain and Camilla Sparv is the heroine.

This is Sharif's first western. As such, it's part of his long-range program for life. "I have this program," he says, "of things I want to do. A western was at the top of the list. Then a musical—that will be 'Funny Girl' with Barbra Streisand, which is next for me. And then I would like to do a modern love story—and I'll do one with Anouk Aimee for Sidney Lumet in Paris after 'Funny Girl.'"

He seems to be thriving in the western atmosphere, enjoying the heat of the Arizona canyons, reveling in the fantastic scenery. He walks around practicing his quick draw and is getting good at it. Between takes, he jokes with the crew or retires to his air-conditioned trailer.

We talked about the Middle East crisis. Although he is an Egyptian native, he has few ties left with that country. All of his family has left—his parents are in Spain; he lives in Paris; a sister is in London.

"I think," Sharif says, "that the recent war may turn out to be a good thing in the long run by leading to a permanent settlement of the major problems. The great mass of Egyptians are uneducated and, therefore, easily led. I feel they can be led just as easily one way as the other."

"My hope is that someone comes along who will lead them away from belligerency." Sharif's son is in an American school in Switzerland. Tarek, who is 10, was in "Dr. Zhivago" with his father and just lately did a film in Switzerland which his father didn't know about and he was furious.

"I didn't want him to do any more films," Sharif says. "He was getting big-headed after 'Zhivago.' He signed his letters to me, 'The Great Star.' But I do want him to be an actor. It is selfish of me, but I feel if he wants to be an actor, I can help him. I can't if he's a doctor."

Sharif has a daughter, 17, who is studying to be an interpreter.

"She is the child of my first girl friend," he says. "She had the baby and she left her with me and we took her into our family. Then the mother went to Venezuela. Not long ago, I was playing in a bridge tournament and that girl was there, playing for Venezuela. When we knew each other, neither of us played bridge. And here we were, both playing in an international tournament."

Camilla Sparv is also making her debut in a western. As originally written, her part was called "Francy," but when she was cast they changed the character's name to "Inga" and let it go at that.

Camilla—Sparv, incidentally, means "sparrow" in Swedish—is enjoying her first exposure to the wide open spaces, although she says it does get dull, seeing the same people every day.

"Sometimes," she says, "I just want to be by myself. Last night I bought some bread and cheese and ate dinner all alone in my motel room. I'd never have a location romance—never, ever—because it can get very complicated. Besides, everybody knows what you're doing."

Camilla, a tall, angular beauty, is very happy that her movie career flowered in the United States rather than her native Sweden. "I'd never do one of those Swedish nude films," she says. "I used to be a big defender of Swedish movies, but after 'Night Games,' I defend them no more."

When she was approached by producer Carl Foreman to do "Mackenna's Gold," he asked her if she could ride and swim. She has to do both in the picture.

"I said yes," she says. "I am a good swimmer, that's no problem. But when I am not shooting, I am taking riding lessons. I have to stay one lesson ahead of the picture."

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP)

"They're changing heads of studios so fast," sighed a harassed agent, "that I don't know whom to be nice to any more."

That was one reaction to the game of musical chairs that has been going on at the major studios. Almost every big company has had a change of production chief within the past two years. Last week three of the studios acquired new bosses.

In a surprise move, MGM President Robert H. O'Brien appointed Clark G. Ramsay as vice president in charge of the studio. Ramsay had been a publicist at Universal before switching to MGM, where he became assistant to O'Brien.

Robert Wieman, who had held the production reins at MGM since 1960, had resigned in January to become vice president in charge of production at Columbia. The present head of the Columbia Studio, Mike Frankovich, is quitting to become an independent producer.

The Warner Bros.-Seven Arts amalgamation last Friday meant that Jack L. Warner, the so-called "Last Tycoon," would be leaving his long-time post as studio head. Supplanting him is Kenneth Hyman, son of Seven Arts founder Elliot Hyman.

Paramount studio is now being headed by its third boss in three years, former actor Robert Evans. Richard Zanuck took over direction of the 20th Century-Fox studio in 1964 after his father, Darryl Zanuck, returned to leadership of the corporation. The Disney studio is being operated by a committee under the supervision of Roy Disney, after the death last December of Walt.

The only studio to maintain the same leadership is Universal, where Edward E. Muhl has been vice president in charge of production since 1953. He survived the M.C.A. takeover in 1962.

All the changes reflect the ferment that has been going on in the film industry. Business is good. Most movie stocks are riding high, reflecting the optimism of investors. The outlook for the future was never better.

But the movie business today requires aggressive management. No longer can the studios sit still and let the deals come to them. Production arrangements must be actively sought by the studio heads. And not only in Hollywood. American films are now being made all over the world.

In the view of this reporter, the biggest challenge facing the new studio bosses is the closing of what might be called the quality gap. Nearly everyone realizes that the excitement in the film medium now comes from Europe, especially England. Much of the Hollywood product, though technically expert, seems dull and old-fashioned.

Critics have been pointing this out. The New York Times' Bosley Crowther recently blasted the "sloppiness, immaturity and shoddy work of one after another of the American movies that have come along this year."

The Los Angeles Times' Charles Champlin likewise deplored four recent big-budget movies, all of them backed by American companies, "for failing what they set out to do." His critique was titled "So Little From So Much."

Next week I will begin writing a series of articles from European film capitals. One of my missions will be to investigate how the foreign film makers, lacking the immense resources of the Hollywood studios, have been able to produce so much from so little.

The "Battle Above the Clouds" took place on Lookout Mountain near Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1863.

Race Bar Broken at Sweet Briar

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — A federal court has upheld legal efforts to break the racially restrictive will of the founder of Sweet Briar College.

State officials have declined to say whether they'll appeal the ruling.

The special three-judge court, which heard the case at Charlottesville, handed down its order Monday but it was not disclosed until Wednesday.

The order permanently enjoined Virginia from enforcing the 1899 will of Sweet Briar's founder, Indiana Fletcher Williams.

Her will directed that the college, chartered by the state in 1901, would be operated "for the education of white girls and young women."

Last fall, however, the fashionable girl's school admitted its first Negro student, Marshalya Yeargin of Greenville, S.C., under a temporary court injunction restraining the state from enforcing Miss Williams' will.

Monday's order, handed down by Judge Albert V. Bryan of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and U.S. District Judges Thomas J. Michie and John D. Butzner Jr., said no state can take action prohibited by the 14th Amendment.

Guarded Gardening

Summertime cleaners and gardeners need to guard their skin with protective clothing, both indoors and out. For instance, keep hair away from the face by tucking it neatly under a band or scarf. Wear well-fitting flats or sneakers indoors, lightweight rubber boots outdoors. Choose comfortable slacks or jeans for ease and practical, pocketed tops or jackets. Whenever possible, protect hands with a hand cream or lotion and cover up with gloves.

Both Fitted and Flared

THIS FINELY styled skimmer is here to show off fashion pure and simple. It's the swinging silhouette that combines a gently fitting bodice with a sweeping A-line skirt and flattering front panel. A dress that's casual, free and easy, will take on, with equal self-assurance, the soft accent of simple topstitching or more striking contrast bows and binding. Set the fashion pace for spring and summer with a lovely Young Original.

Our accompanying Fashion Co-ordinator will provide a versatile assortment of accessories, color and fabric combinations.

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

A WHIRLWIND OF HATS IS ENGULFING YOU: YOUTH BEAT has eyed an ominous sign for some months now . . . that hats are coming back for girls. Regardless of whether this momentous happening grows to a full-fledged style front, hats are here, this summer. Pert British actress Judy Geeson informed this column privately, over a month ago, that sombreros had sprung up with the spring flowers in England. Now a leading authority in the U. S. millinery world reveals all. Early this year young Parisiennes, for no reason, suddenly sported sombrero-type hats . . . had jumped to England (where the smart set is smart enough to copy youth). This intercontinental headgear surge has hit U. S. Most popular is the soft, crushable, floppy-brimmed, girl sombrero (a la Greta Garbo) . . . also the Aussie digger (Australian cowboy type) that's stiffer brimmed . . . both circled by 3 1/2 to 4-inch brims and in solid colors. Next, the snap brim (more like a man's everyday hat—high crown, small brim) in non-everyday colors like glaring orange, apple green, bright beige.

In straw, grandpa's stiff yellow model is coming back some (it's shaped like the low-crowned Civil War ironclad, Monitor) . . . More graceful for girls is the Louisiana planter's version of white, thin straw, natural crown, fedora-type brim. Alas, guys, girls are stealing your hats, this summer . . . But the fierce force of fashion makes amends for this. Deep research has discovered: as skirts get shorter more heads hide under hats . . . and as bikinis get skimpier, the shrinkage of apparel is made up for by bigger beach hats.

CRUNCHY, CHEWY, TASTY BUGS — FUTURE DIET: Grandpop stuck to meat and potatoes . . . Dad scorned salads as a boy, but succumbed to them when courting mom. The American diet just in the last few years has increased in prodigious variety (all the new fresh frozen foods, for instance) . . . But (here, too) a disturbing portent looms for the future—You may eat insects. University of California's Dr. Ronald L. Taylor points out that shortages of staple foods plague the world . . . then spices up his entomology classes by serving fried caterpillars or chocolate-covered bees. Civilized man's aversion to dining on the earth's rich hordes of insects he calls "irrational." Tastier and "cleaner" than many of today's prized foods, insects are more than a "food of the future." At movies in South America toasted leaf-cutting ants are sold like popcorn . . . both Japan and China down appreciate guilts in Africa . . . both Japan and China highly esteem a juicy snack of silkworm pupae . . . while across our border in Mexico, the butterfly larva that hatches in the same plant that pulque, a national drink, is made from is savored to gulp down with the drink. To the hesitant beginner sampling this wonderful new larva of nature, Dr. Taylor suggests—raw, toasted, fried, boiled, curried, powdered or baked . . . your everyday, back yard grass-hopper.

ALL IS NOT GOLD THAT GLITTERS, GUYS: Soviet Russia, General De Gaulle and U.S. government are all trying to muscle in on the gold supply . . . So why shouldn't U. S. youth, too (girls mostly, but boys, too . . . and, of course, boys bedecking girls in gold). Start came with the pierced ears frenzy—when doctors insisted on the sterility of 12K to 14K (karat) gold for earrings.

Since then there has been a quiet upswing in young adult purchase of golden trinkets, the jewelry industry reports. More money scattered among more young people has made more geegaws in gold easier to afford . . . and new variety in designs (combining gold with precious stones and such) has stimulated teen tastes for gold ornaments. Meanwhile, the price of gold, by federal ukase, has remained frozen at 1934 prices (suppose this had happened with cars, education and clothes!)

Some tips about buying the glittering stuff: Key to its value is the number of karats—pure gold is 24 karat (too soft to stand rough jewelry wear) . . . for every part of alloy added, one karat goes up the flue, but below 10 karat it's usually not considered quality gold . . . So when a girl (or a guy) gets gold adornment, it's nicest to receive it in 14K to 18K (always stamped right into the piece).

Sunday & Monday At Saenger

Marlon Brando discovers that Sophia Loren has an irresistible allure in the fun-packed romantic comedy in Technicolor, Charles Chaplin's "A Countess from Hong Kong," released by Universal.

Tues. - Wed. At Saenger

DRIFTERS IN TREACHEROUS SEA: On the Mediterranean island of Ibiza, a colony of expatriates who have rejected society, seek new thrill sensations involving use of drugs and LSD. Danny Stone, starring in "Hallucination Generation," Trans American release, is seen (right center) as he joins weird group for first time.

Except The LORD Build The HOUSE They Labor In Vain That Build It

LIGHT

GOD said, "Let there be light: and there was light."
How much is shining on you? Are you just sitting there — oblivious to the needs of your fellow-man — and inactive in your church?
Then a cloud is hiding you! Want to be a reflector?
Then get out in the open — out where the light can beam upon you.
Absorb aplenty of it... enough to purify and light up the dark corners of your soul. Lead your family and others to church. That is being a reflector of real light... true light.
For, "God is light and in Him is no darkness." 1 John 1-5.

Too often we are inclined to think that anybody who spends a dollar for advertising does it from a purely selfish standpoint. But here, public - spirited, God - worshipping people, are paying each week to insert in this paper a full page, from which they will draw no quick response nor prompt sale. These people are good and humble business men — We owe them our gratitude.

Castro Aide Is Accused in Bolivia

By ROBERT BERRELLEZ CAMIRI, Bolivia (AP) - Regis Debray, a young French writer awaiting trial in South-east Bolivia, says Ernesto "Che" Guevara organized the Bolivian guerrilla movement but is no longer in the country.

Debray, 26, an admirer of Fidel Castro, told newsmen he did not see Castro's Argentine associate whose whereabouts have been a mystery since the spring of 1965. But he emphasized, that Guevara is "very much alive" and in Latin America.

Contradicting Debray, Ciro Roberto Bustos, an Argentine painter, said he and Debray met and spoke with Guevara in Bolivia earlier this year.

Bustos, 35, and Debray were arrested April 20 as they emerged from a guerrilla camp. Bustos is expected to be the government's chief witness at Debray's military trial on charges of collaborating with the Communist guerrillas.

The two men were interviewed separately at 4th Division military headquarters here where they are being held in different buildings.

Debray, who could get a maximum sentence of 30 years if convicted, said he entered Bolivia early in March to do a newspaper report on the Bolivian "Army of National Liberation," the Communist name for guerrilla movements in the hemisphere.

Bustos said he arrived Feb. 28 and met Debray en route to this oil town 360 miles southeast of La Paz. The first guerrilla clash with Bolivian troops occurred March 23.

Bustos said he was invited to Bolivia to attend "a political reunion" but on arrival was taken from one city to another until he arrived in Camiri and went deep into the mountains to the guerrillas' first camp.

The Argentine refused to say more about the meeting to which he had been invited and also was reluctant to say how many foreigners were with the guerrillas.

"Che came with his people," he said.

Asked if he meant Cubans, he nodded affirmatively.

Reports that Guevara has been murdered or died are not true, Debray declared.

"Che Guevara is alive, very much alive. He's in Latin America and even if he was in Bolivia at a certain moment, his mission is continentwide."

South's Squeeze Works Smoothly

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The late Edward Hymes was just about as good a dummy player as there ever has been. In addition Eddie was somewhat of a show-off when he could afford to be.

He sat South and let West's king of spades hold the first trick. This gave up the over-trick if hearts and diamonds both broke 3-3 but Eddie had bid six, not seven. He didn't think that West would continue the suit but stranger things have happened and a spade continuation would give him 12 tricks in high cards.

West didn't fall into that trap. He shifted to the jack of diamonds. Eddie won with dummy's king and led the ace of diamonds. West discarded a spade. Eddie thought awhile and claimed the balance of the tricks. He said, "Perfect squeeze, if I need it."

East and West both protested so Eddie showed his hand and played it out as fast as he could get his opponents to play.

He ran off four club tricks, discarding his six of hearts. Each opponent had no trouble discarding on that trick. West threw a spade; East a diamond.

Then Eddie led to his queen of diamonds. West was down to queen-ten of spades and four hearts but he discarded a heart as nonchalantly as he could considering that it was just as if Eddie had pulled his last tooth.

Eddie remarked to West, "I don't know if you have already been squeezed or not but you can't have more than three hearts, come what may. I am now going to lead my ace of spades. If East started with one spade, four hearts; five diamonds and three clubs this will force him to jettison his own heart stopper."

"O.K.," said West. "We concede."

Anti-War Group Is on March

WASHINGTON (AP) - While President Johnson sends two top advisers on a tough Vietnam selling mission, a group of congressional interns is thinking of attempting an even tougher job on Johnson - selling him antiwar sentiments.

The Johnson advisers going to Asia, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor and Clark Clifford, are trying to get six allies to boost their troop commitments in Vietnam.

The Capitol Hill young people want the United States to cut or eliminate its own commitments in that war-torn country.

Rep. Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., said Thursday some of the 1,300 young interns working in Washington this summer are circulating a petition among the rest and are planning an antiwar protest at the White House later this year.

He said they have discussed seeking a face-to-face meeting with Johnson - and then perhaps walking out on him in a bid for wider news coverage.

Michel protested "that the prestige of our offices is being used to foster a given point of view."

The administration point of view is being marketed by Taylor and Clifford in a followup to Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara's recent visit to South Vietnam.

It reportedly is blamed at getting Vietnam's allies to match in part predicted increases in U.S. forces.

Clifford, a longtime advisor to presidents, will ask for a total of 35,000 more troops in visits to South Korea, the Philippines, Thailand, Australia and New Zealand as well as South Vietnam.

The White House said Taylor and Clifford also would sound out Asian allies in Vietnam on the possibility of another summit conference in the fall.

CARBONDALE, Ill.—(NEA)—When somebody mentions money, Larry Kristoff turns his head in the other direction.

"Who needs it?" said Kristoff, the 250-pound Southern Illinois farm boy who is the United States' top heavyweight wrestler. "I'd rather win a championship in the Olympics."

Larry has turned down rich offers to go into professional wrestling, pro football and college coaching to preserve his amateur standing until after the 1968 Olympics in Mexico City.

The 24-year-old Kristoff, a national collegiate champion at Southern Illinois University, resumes international competition in the Pan-American Games at Winnipeg, Canada.

He also is looking forward to another bid for the World Games championship in New Delhi, India, in November.

Kristoff, who now wrestles out of the Mayor Daley Club of Chicago although he still lives here, finished second to Russia's Aleksandr Ivanitsky, the Olympic gold medalist, in the 1966 World Games in Toledo, Ohio.

Ivanitsky and Kristoff battled to a scoreless draw, but the Russian won the crown on points. The two giants also dueled to a deadlock in the 1965 World Games.

Kristoff, in fact, had not been beaten since Ivanitsky did it in the 1964 Olympics in Tokyo where Larry finished seventh.

"If I get a chance to meet Ivanitsky again, I think I can beat him," said Kristoff, matter-of-factly. "I'm sure he's just as good as ever, but I think I've improved more than he has."

"Larry's improved a great deal just in the last six months," said Jim Wilkinson, SIU's wrestling coach who continues to direct Kristoff's training program.

The Giants have 40 rookies in camp, but only six probably will make the club.

"You have to figure Thompson has the best chance of sticking," says one club official. "The coaches are very high on him, from what they know about his college play. But you never know for sure. He'll have to earn the job."

For his part, Thompson is "nervous but confident."

"This is quite an experience," he says. "This is the first time I've ever been up North. I spent all my time in Tennessee, Alabama and Florida. Didn't know it got this hot up here."

For a southerner, Thompson has a real fondness for Yankees if they happen to be the New York Yankees.

"I've been a Yankee fan all my life," Lou says, "but when it comes to football I've always rooted for the Browns. Always wanted to play in Yankee Stadium though, and now I'm going to get the chance."

Thompson, who says he has no future plans ("I just worry about the present"), is proud of what he's accomplished so far.

"Both in high school and college," he says. "I've always been on winning teams. I've always been associated with a winner."

Maybe some of that association will rub off on the Giants.

Kristoff, who is married and the father of a young son, just hopes his work will pay off in America's first Olympic heavyweight title since 1924.

"It really hasn't been bad," said Kristoff. "I've never had any financial problems and my wife has been very understanding."

His family has a small but successful farm near here and he has a full-time job as a driver education instructor at a Carbondale high school.

After the 1968 Olympics? "Maybe then," said Larry. "I'll start listening to some of that money they've been talking about."

The Rebel Likes Yankees

FAIRFIELD, Conn.—(NEA)—You had to look hard to spot the New York Giants' No. 1 draft choice. He doesn't stand out in a crowd, especially when the crowd is composed of aspiring linebackers and headbreakers.

His name is Lou Thompson and he's from Lebanon, Tenn., and the University of Alabama. The roster says he's 21, 6-2, 240, but he doesn't look it.

"I guess maybe I look smaller than I really am," Thompson drawled, "but football is just full of big guys. All the while I was at Alabama I never remember looking across the line and seeing a guy who wasn't a little bit bigger than me."

Thompson is a hunk of prize beef around here. He's a defensive lineman and the Giants, who won only one game last year, need more help in the defensive line than anywhere else. That's why, much to his surprise, the Giants went for Thompson on their first pick.

"I was sitting home with my wife, Peggy, watching TV when they announced that the Giants had drafted me first. I was a little shook up," he remembers.

Peggy is a Tennessee girl who ended up going to the university while Lou slipped over the border into Alabama when Bear Bryant came along with a four-year scholarship in hand.

The Giants plan to try Thompson at defensive tackle, which is fine with Lou. He has experience at defensive end and guard as well and played fullback in high school.

"I can run 40 yards in 4.7 seconds," says Thompson. "and speed has never been a problem. Quickness has always been the big thing I've had going for me."

Thompson has the hard-nosed outlook needed to make it big in pro ball. Looking back on his high school days, as a ball carrier, he recalls, "I didn't really enjoy it that much. To tell you the truth, I'd much rather play the line. I just love to hit people. I like that contact."

Coach Allie Sherman promises that Lou will get plenty of contact between now and the time the season starts Sept. 17.

The Giants have 40 rookies in camp, but only six probably will make the club.

"You have to figure Thompson has the best chance of sticking," says one club official. "The coaches are very high on him, from what they know about his college play. But you never know for sure. He'll have to earn the job."

Tim McCarver of the St. Louis Cardinals is risking his good standing with his fellow catchers. "A pitcher makes the catcher. It's not the other way around."

"Catchers are given credit where it isn't due . . . The pitcher has to get the man out . . . Both the pitcher and catcher know that you have to pitch batters either high and tight or low and away, just like Doubleday meant it to be . . . This is routine in most cases and isn't as hard as it may appear."

Some of the most near-sighted people in sports are those who administer inter-collegiate athletics . . . A. M. (Tonto) Coleman, the commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, says, "Perhaps next to the home and church the greatest influence for good today is to be found in our athletic programs . . . In fact, about the only ironclad discipline left, in many instances, is on the athletic fields. . . . Look at the campuses where there's trouble. . . . It's with the bearded, long-haired, tennis-shoe element. . . . You don't see the athletes involved in that."

And you don't see these crew-cut, clean-shaven athletes involved in a lot of other things . . . Vietnam, for example . . . Perhaps Tonto can explain why so few of these physically fit young men wind up in Vietnam as foot soldiers after graduating . . . That might entail investigating the athletic "system (college and pro)" an investigation that could be very embarrassing to organized sports as well as the military . . .

The New York Knickerbockers maintain it is strictly a coincidence that they have switched their pre-season training camp (Sept. 11-26) to McGuire Air Force Base, N.J., about 60 miles from New York . . .

"It has nothing to do with Bill Bradley," a Knick spokesman said . . . Bradley entered the Air Force for six months, in an officer's candidate program, early in July . . . According to the Knicks, Bradley is stationed in Texas for 85 days . . . "We'll be through with camp by the time he'd get to McGuire, if he's sent there at all," the spokesman said . . .

An odd switch . . . Assistant basketball coach Howard Braun, fired from his job at the University of Illinois, because of his involvement in the recent slush fund scandal, has a public relations job with a Champaign, Ill., bank . . .

Sparks and Split Seconds

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — J. Paul Getty, who is said to have more coin than anybody else in the whole world, has some advice for car owners on how to drive economically.

Oh, O.K., J. Paul! We promise not to roar away from stoplights in the Ferrari and we'll have the old Rolls in for check-up every five years.

Says 74-year-old Mr. Getty, from his small pad in jolly old England: "No cost-conscious motorist can afford to be without a chauffeur—even if he secretly plays the role himself."

Admittedly, Getty does know a few things about oil, beyond how it can be sold for profit. But he says he got all his dope on car economy from watching the painstaking performances of his chauffeurs. Here are some of his findings:

"A single faulty spark plug (cost 70 cents) causing misfiring in one cylinder can add $36.40 to the fuel bill for a motorist who averages 7,400 miles annually.

"An engine filter choked with dirt can cost $16.80 in the course of a year.

"Defective piston rings can add $14 to the bill.

"An error of five pounds in tire pressure reduces tire life by one-third, costing $8.40 a year for the average family motorist in England, a few dollars more for the sports car addict who likes to charge upon occasions."

Getty's car economy studies come to us by way of the British Motor Corporation (MGB-GT, MGB, Austin Healey, Sprite, etc.) which offers his economy ideas with its new cars . . .

Any race driver, rank amateur or ranking professional, will tell you that you can't really appreciate speed and competition until you can appreciate that "split second" race people are always talking about.

"Somebody told me after a race once," says Indianapolis three-time winner A. J.

Foyt, "that I shouldn't be so happy, that I had only won the race by two seconds. I just laughed."

No need to explain Foyt's point. Still, the split second in racing is beyond the novice's grasp. Don't believe it? Try rallying. You don't need scads of money to set up a car and you don't even have to go fast.

If you aren't familiar with it, automobile rallying roughly is something like a trip over the meadow and through the woods to grandmother's house when you don't know where she lives or how to get there, but you must be there on time.

It's great sport for people who don't dig Sunday picnics, who like to drive cars but can't or won't race. You don't necessarily need a performance (sports) car and you can even bring along the missus or a date.

In rallying, time, speed and distance traveled—and accuracy in making the correct turns at precisely the right moment—are all-important. The driver-navigator team which completes the course (40 or 50 miles, usually) fastest is not the winner.

Rather, the team which drives off with honors is the one that comes closest to passing all check points and arrives at destination at the fraction of a second nearest the critical moment established by the rally committee.

Safe, precision driving is a must. Speeds are established at or below the posted limits. And average speeds over legs between check points are computed to the hundredth of a mile per hour. A traffic ticket during competition is like grounds for disqualification!

Each driver-navigator team is given a set of instructions—route to follow, turns, check points, prescribed time to complete the course, etc. While the driver concentrates his skills on maintaining proper speed, his/her navigator is occupied with course instructions, accurate timing devices (a watch with sweep second hand as a minimum) and precise computation gear—up to a slide rule or even complex electronic instruments.

If you're interested, check with your local Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) regional office and they'll tell you how, where and when to enter one.

Roy Attaway's Outdoor Notebook

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The guy who spends hours at Abner Crombie's selecting hand-tied flies is kidding himself if he thinks piscatorial appetites begin with natural food-stuffs and end with such painstaking imitations.

"Most lures," a wizened guide once remarked, "were designed to catch fishermen, not fish."

All due credit to the men on the eighth floor of A&F. If you're going to buy artificial lures, by all means invest in the best. However . . .

Recall the old calendar painting showing the kid in overalls dragging a string of beautiful trout—caught on a bent clothespin and worms—past the envious glances of impeccably outfitted fly fishermen? It happens.

Of course, if you can't stoop to fishing with the common "garden hackle"—as worms are tastefully called in the New York Times—you needn't despair. A little imagination, and you, too, artificially, you've got to take a meticulously tied Quill Gordon and present it just right . . . oh, so delicately . . . on a 6X tipped.

One bright June day, in the forest-clad mountains of North Carolina, I was wading the Ravensfork River, one of the East's least-known trout streams. Since dawn, I had presented . . . delicately . . . a series of dry flies to the ordinarily hungry brownies, brooks and rainbows. One beautiful little brown I had.

One. On rounding a broad curve in the river, I came upon a lady angler patiently working the pools and riffles. She looked as if she should know what she was doing. I stood on the bank and watched as she caught a handsome rainbow, moved downstream and promptly caught another.

When she came abreast of me, I said something terribly original, like, "Hi, there."

"Good morning," she said. "You're doing well."

"I've got a few," she admitted.

Everybody knows that carp are suckers for doughballs. But, then, except for those giant carp in India which think they're tarpon in sheep's clothing, who's really interested in carp?

Bass? (Small or large-mouth.) Bass are ornery. They'll hit anything that wiggles, pops, gurgles, slides, glides, swims or otherwise acts alive.

Tie two chicken feathers to a gang hook and have a ball with crappie.

Wind a piece of pipe cleaner around a small hook and watch those nutty bluegills snatch it for a grub.

Trout? Trout are finicky, right? Everybody knows that in order to take trout with knowledge.

"Royal coachman?" I inquired. "Blue Dun? Black Gnat, I'll bet? Dry? Wet?"

"Corn," she said.

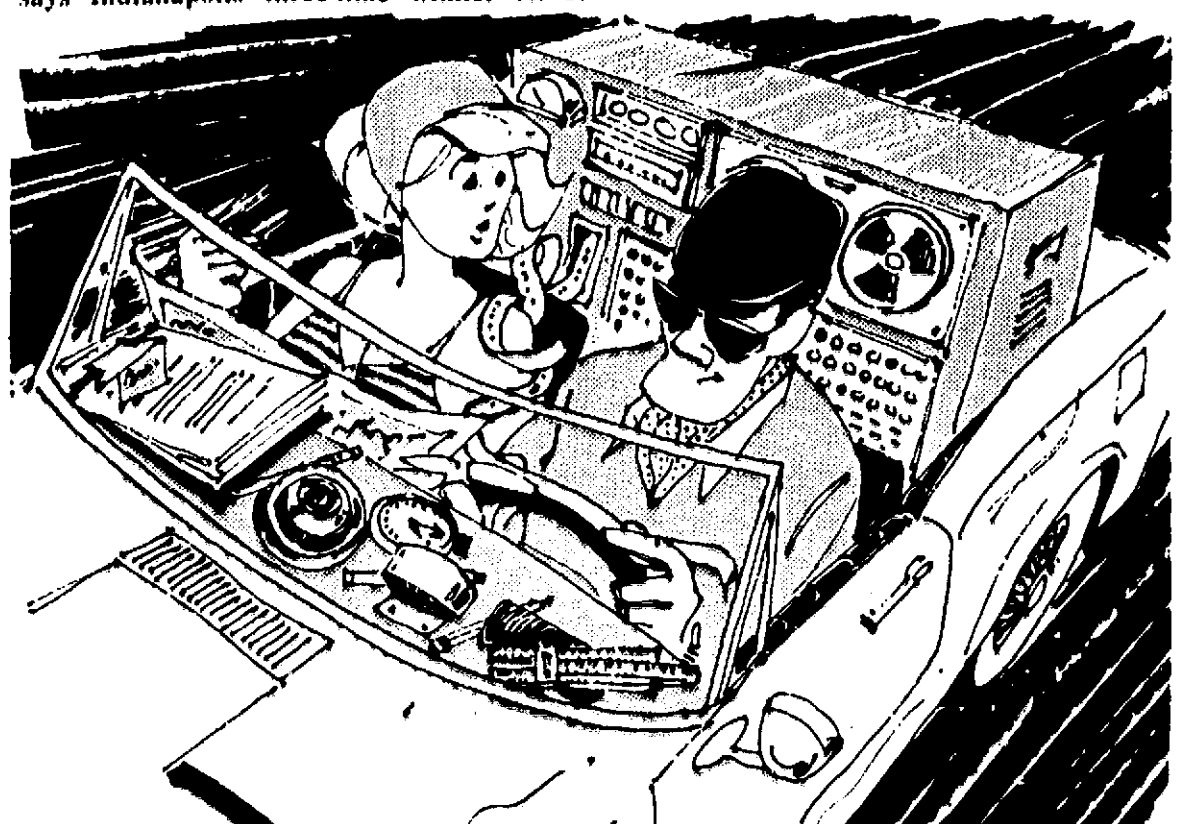

At first, I pretended I hadn't heard.

"Corn," she said again.

Three or four nibbles threaded on a small hook. This she let wash down in the current. The trout thought they were eggs.

I bade her a scornful farewell, tiptoed back to the car, drove straightway to the crossroads grocery, invested in a can of the Jolly Green Giant's finest and never had more fun in my life.

Fair Trial

An answer to recent agitation to impose curbs on the press to prevent publication of material alleged to be prejudicial to defendants in criminal cases is being published this month by the Twentieth Century Fund. The study, Crime and Publicity: The Impact of News on Criminal Justice, was written by Alfred Friendly and Ronald L. Goldfarb - the first, managing editor of The Washington Post, the second, a Washington trial lawyer. The authors reviewed a number of well-published cases and reached such conclusions as these:

1. Less than one-fifth of state felony cases ever reach the stage of trial by jury, and of these not more than two per cent get enough press attention to have any possible influence - prejudicial or otherwise - on the trial.

2. People accept too readily the "myth" that British rules keep the press from publishing any material not actually brought out at the trial itself, and that such a system would work in this country. Neither contention, the authors found, is accurate.

3. Attempts to curb the press by the threat of contempt proceedings are not effective: "Over the last two decades the Supreme Court has so consistently reversed contempt convictions . . . that today the press is little deterred by the threat of being held contemptuous."

These are negative findings. Positively, the authors argue: "With all its faults, the press serves the cause of justice far more than it subverts it. For it is the agent of public scrutiny . . . Laws and regulations that would make news coverage perilous would gravely reduce the potential of the press to monitor the step-by-step march of each defendant along the road to justice. It is unrealistic to expect the press to be the vigilant watchdog while at the same time it is being threatened with punishment for publishing something which seems to it central to an exposure of justice going awry but which may appear to the court as willful disclosure of some item on the list of taboos . . ."

"For the sake of balance it is necessary to remember that if the press behaved precisely as its severest critics wished, the much worse roots of unfair trial would still remain: coerced confessions, absence of competent counsel, racial prejudice, etc. In the very exercise of the function that provokes the fair trial problem, the press is at the same time serving as the community's most effective instrument for detecting and exposing those other, more serious enemies of fair trial." - Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser

Nobel Prize Winner Dies of Injuries

DURBAN, South Africa (AP) - Chief Albert Luthuli, 68, Nobel Peace Prize winner seven years ago, died today of injuries suffered when he was hit by a train.

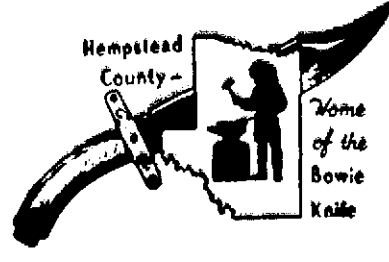

The accident occurred at Stanger, about 30 miles north of here.

He was struck by a freight train on a railway bridge near Gledhouse station while walking on the tracks.

Luthuli won the Nobel Prize for 1960. This was a bombshell in South Africa, where the white supremacy government had confined him to his native town of Grootville.

A Zulu chief and a Christian, Luthuli was deposed from his chieftainship by the government in 1952. He had been president also of the now-banned African National Congress.

Sen. Brooke Would Probe Race Trouble

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward W. Brooke, the Senate's only Negro member, plans soon to propose immediate creation of a select committee with "the broadest latitude" to investigate causes and possible cures of racial rioting.

"I honestly feel the country is looking to the Senate for leadership in furnishing affirmative action to solve what is certainly one of the most urgent domestic problems we have ever faced," the Massachusetts Republican said in a letter to Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield.

Brooke sent Mansfield a proposed resolution calling the bloody riots in Newark, N.J., "a civil disturbance of such dimension that the entire country is justifiably concerned that both the occurrence and the intensity of such riots are increasing."

"A number of communities in all parts of the United States contain the social, economic and political factors which threaten to lead to further violence," the Brooke resolution declares.

In it, the Massachusetts senator seeks creation of a seven-member select committee on civil disorder to investigate the issue and report to the Senate.

The panel would, Brooke said, consider cause and effect, community attitudes and official response to grievances. It also would recommend to the Senate "measures which may be adopted by the Congress to remedy the conditions which have resulted in civil disorder."

Brooke said he intends to introduce the resolution early next week and hopes it can be adopted speedily - without going to a committee for consideration - "so that the select committee could begin its work immediately."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Henry Reuss says what the government tells the public about arms sales to foreign nations differs from the secret testimony given Congress.

"Someone is trying to fool both the public and the United States Congress," Reuss, D-Wis., said Thursday, shortly after the State Department made public portions of secret testimony before a congressional committee.

Reuss accused the Defense Department of trying to hide the federal Export-Import Bank's role in providing credit for massive foreign purchases of U.S.-produced arms.

He said when Pentagon officials testified before a closed session of the House Banking Committee Monday, they insisted figures they gave on arms loans be kept secret.

Some of the figures made public by the State Department don't jive with statistics the congressmen were supposed to keep secret, said Reuss, a member of the committee.

After hearing the Pentagon testimony, the committee approved legislation to continue the Export-Import Bank's charter and hike its operating authorization by $4.5 billion.

Ambassador to Resign Post

MEXICO CITY (AP) - Haiti's ambassador to Mexico, Jules Pierra Audain, says he is resigning his post because of "the sepulchral peace now prevailing in my country."

Audain, the dean of the diplomatic corps in Mexico, told newsmen Thursday night he still considers himself a friend of Haitian President Francois Duvalier but plans to stay in Mexico, writing his memoirs and following his former profession as a civil engineer.

The popular diplomat said Duvalier's dictatorship is based on "such a psychosis of fear that nobody dares contradict him." He said he had often advised Duvalier to relax his rule but to no avail.

Walther in Appeal on Job Status

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - Glenn F. Walther of Little Rock today appealed to the Arkansas Supreme Court a Pulaski Chancery Court ruling that declared his appointment to the Public Service Commission illegal and void.

The ruling was handed down April 26 by Chancellor Murray O. Reed in a taxpayer's suit filed by David C. McDonald Jr. of Stuttgart.

Walther had been appointed to the commission by the state Senate after the Senate declined to confirm Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller's appointment of Jerry K. Thomasson to the post.

Following the court action, Rockefeller appointed Robert Downie of Little Rock to the commission.

Young pleaded guilty.

Writ Asked By Publisher

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) - An attorney for publisher Helio Fernandes, banished for a bitter editorial attack on the late former President Humberto Castello Branco, says he is asking the Brazilian supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus.

Fernandes was banished Thursday to the desolate island of Fernando de Noronha, 225 miles off Brazil's northeast coast. A front-page editorial in his paper after Castello Branco was killed in a plane collision Tuesday said the former president was calculating and merciless and humanity lost nothing by his death.

Justice Minister Luiz da Gama e Silva said the editorial was a threat to order. He asserted the banishment was not an arrest, "just a residence order."

Injunction Is Filed on T.J. Silvey

MELBOURNE, Ark. (AP) - A suit asking that T. J. Silvey be enjoined from serving as superintendent of the Calico Rock School District has been filed in Izard Chancery Court here by some 300 taxpayers.

One of the allegations in the suit is that Silvey has textbooks in the schools which teach the theory of evolution, but John I. Purdie of Little Rock, one of two attorneys in the case, said it was not intended as a test of the state law that forbids the teaching of evolution.

Purdie said that Silvey could not be prosecuted under the criminal provision of the state law, but that he would be required to remove the books from the school if the injunction were granted.

The suit asks for an accounting of alleged illegal expenditures of schools funds.

It also alleges that Silvey used School District gasoline in his personal car, made personal use of credit cards belonging to the district and used federal money to purchase remedial reading materials for which students subsequently were charged.

A three-member investigating committee of the Arkansas Education Association checked the operation of the Calico Rock District last month, but has made no report of its findings.

New Panama Treaty Still Weeks Off

PANAMA (AP) - Signing of the new Panama Canal treaties by the United States and Panama may be weeks away, a source close to President Marco A. Robles has indicated.

Robles on Wednesday denied reports that he would go to Washington Monday for the signing. He said he has not decided whether he will go to Washington at all.

The source said Robles will carry out his pledge to consult his Foreign Relations Council, the Cabinet and former presidents of Panama before signing the treaties, which make major revisions in the management and distribution of revenue from the new canal and also deal with the possible construction of a new canal in Panama.

Austin said a warrant charging the Presbyterian minister with murder had been delivered to the hospital, but that "we can't do anything more until he is released."

Rep. Powell Cancels His Trip Home

BIMINI, Bahamas (AP) - Adam Clayton Powell kept a lot of people waiting for him at the black power conference in Newark, N.J., and at Kennedy Airport in New York. He did not show up, and he did not send his regrets.

The ousted congressman from Harlem called a news conference today at his tiny island retreat in the British Bahamas.

Powell also stood up a delegation from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People Friday who said in New York they had arranged for Powell to surrender for arrest to New York County Sheriff John J. McCloskey.

Powell's troubles in his constituency stem from a 1963 libel judgment against the congressman by Esther James, a widow whom Powell called a "bag woman" - a graft collector for crooked police.

Powell had been expected to attend the black power conference Friday.

He faces a jail term of at least 90 days in New York for criminal contempt. A Supreme Court jury found him guilty last fall of evading court orders in connection with a libel judgment.

By JOHN A. LUNDQUIST
MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) - Hundreds of National Guardsmen brought a tense peace today to the city's North Side Negro area hit by two successive nights of violence.

Two fires broke out at a Catholic church and school Friday night, however, and the fire department said an arsonist had touched them off.

In adjacent St. Paul, police reported that two gasoline-filled bottles were ignited and thrown into a street in the Negro area of Selby Avenue and Dale Street. A few rocks were tossed by a small crowd that gathered.

Some 650 National Guardsmen, 400 of them in Minneapolis and the others in St. Paul, halted most of the fire-starting, rock-throwing and car-tipping of Wednesday and Thursday nights.

Gov. Harold LeVander, acting at the request of Minneapolis Mayor Arthur Naftalin, called out the guard Friday morning. The governor vowed that "rampant lawlessness and bloodshed will not be allowed" in any city of the state.

Minneapolis fire officials said two fires broke out in St. Joseph's Catholic church at either end of a basement tunnel connecting the church and adjacent school.

The blazes were brought under control within an hour but smoke and water damage was extensive.

The old church and school are about a half mile from where the National Guard and scores of policemen were posted along Plymouth Avenue.

Of Minneapolis' 483,000 population about 3 per cent are Negroes. Many are concentrated into semislum sections of the North Side, although there are no row house tenements. Interspersed with the old frame homes on Plymouth Avenue are small commercial shops like drug stores, cafes, cleaning shops and food and hardware stores. The area is two miles northwest of the downtown section.

Negro spokesmen link poor living conditions and alleged lack of job opportunities to the outbreak.

Nose Broken in Accident

KANAB, Utah (AP) - Actor Omar Sharif's nose was broken Wednesday when his horse reared its head during the filming of a scene in "MacKenzie's Gold."

Sharif appears with Gregory Peck and Julie Newmar in the motion picture being filmed in the desert 43 miles southeast of Kanab.

A spokesman for Columbia Pictures said Sharif's horse lowered its head but snapped it back suddenly as the actor leaned down to reach it.

Sharif, who starred in "Dr. Zhivago," said he expected to be back at work today.

The successful building of anything depends on good equipment, proper location, and men who know their business and are willing to work for the benefit of all. We in Hope and the state of Arkansas, happily, can meet all these requirements.

First, the people themselves are the best equipment that could be found in any city or state. Their natural aptitude and acquired skills in various fields give ample opportunity for growth and development, and an organization built on solid human framework has a better chance for survival.

Second, our location is ideal for future expansion. The boundaries of Arkansas are within the Magic Circle of the central United States as designated by the late economist, Roger Babson. This state is close enough to reach her neighbors but not too near to be engulfed by them; the same thing is true of our community. Arkansas, at various times, has been called the Wonder State and the Land of Opportunity. Both names are apt.

Third, no structure is built well without the careful plans of an architect and the able work of many. Just as one person can't build a house, so one alone can't build a state or a community. But under good leadership the people can develop either to its fullest capacity.

Whether the interest in a vision of people and land is from the standpoint of agriculture, industry, livestock, business, the arts, politics, education, or recreation, the key work is interest. People have to be interested in the growth of their

Fairer Shake Is Due for Consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) - A series of federal and congressional actions improves the outlook for U.S. consumers. If all bear fruit, buyers may not necessarily save money but they'll be assured a fairer shake in the marketplace.

While federal agencies moved Thursday to implement or impose rules governing sale of food and transistor radios, congressional subcommittees worked toward improving the auto insurance shopper's lot and looking out for air travelers.

These were the developments: - The Federal Trade Commission proposed a rule that would force sellers of transistor radios to list in their advertising and labeling a true count of the number of transistors.

The FTC said the practice of listing transistors that don't really add to a radio's effectiveness misleads purchasers into believing certain radios are better than they actually are.

It was learned that Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., has ordered the staff of his House antitrust subcommittee to probe the auto insurance industry. Aim of the investigation: To see whether the industry should retain its 1945 congressional exemption from antitrust laws.

The probe apparently resulted from a request by subcommittee members Reps. Peter J. Rodino, D-N.J., and William T. Cahill, D-N.J., who told Celler in a letter of widespread complaints that auto insurance firms discriminate among purchasers on racial, occupational and economic grounds.

The Food and Drug Administration announced its new rules requiring food packagers to state clearly on labels the quantity in each package. The rules become effective Dec. 31.

Starting then, each food container must specify in bold face type the net quantity in total ounces for all containers less than four pounds or one gallon.

Chairman Harley O. Staggers, D-W. Va., announced the House Commerce Committee would start public hearings Monday on aviation safety.

He said the committee may try to determine the cause of Wednesday's collision of a small private plane and a commercial transport which killed 82 persons in North Carolina.

homeland before it can expand. They must first of all believe in themselves before they can convince others of their worth.

Like oriental builders, we are saying the foundation of our verbal structure for last. It is, by far, the most important element, for it must be the most substantial. To build with a good foundation, our house, whether the size of the state or of the community, should be on the rock of good principles, straightforward planning, and God-fearing actions. In this way we, the people, can build a better Arkansas and can emphasize Hope to our fellowmen.

Direction of Explorer Is Changed

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) - Ground controllers today triggered a tiny gas jet aboard America's Lunar Explorer spacecraft and successfully changed its pointing direction as it sped on course toward an orbit around the moon.

"The maneuver worked beautifully," said National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials as the radiation-studying mooncraft passed the three-quarter mark in its 225,608-mile trip through space.

The windmill-shaped craft, officially named Explorer 35, was launched Wednesday from Cape Kennedy. It is to trigger a retro-rocket about 5:30 a.m. (EDT) Saturday to swing it into an orbit around the moon ranging between 800 and 4,500 miles over the lunar surface.

There, for the next two to three years, sensors aboard the 230-pound payload were to study cosmic dust, magnetic fields and potential radiation hazards facing moon-bound astronauts. No camera is aboard.

Today's maneuver adjusted the spacecraft's orientation slightly to change the direction of the retro-motor, aiming Explorer 35 toward an orbit where its experiment sensors have the best viewing angles, officials said.

Vietnam Hero Is Released by Army

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - Marine Cpl. Robert Dean Rosegrant, 19, the sole survivor of a search and destroy mission attacked by the Viet Cong June 15 in Quang Nam Province, South Vietnam, would like to complete his enlistment telling other recruits about the dangers in Vietnam, but has been told that he will receive a medical discharge, his father said here Thursday.

Rosegrant, the son of Eugene Rosegrant of Little Rock and Mrs. Betty Rosegrant of El Dorado, was wounded five times by machine gun fire while on a mission with the Battalion Scouts of the Second Battalion of the Seventh Marine Division.

His father said he was taken by hospital ship from Vietnam to Guam, where he boarded a plane for the United States. He now is at the Millington Marine and Naval Hospital at Memphis.

Rosegrant said his son enlisted in the Marines in the summer of 1966 and arrived in Vietnam Sept. 15.

Brother of Governor to Visit State

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - David Rockefeller, brother of Govs. Winthrop Rockefeller and Nelson Rockefeller, will be the principal speaker at the fifth annual Arkansas Economic Education banquet Aug. 2 in Little Rock.

Rockefeller, president and chairman of the Executive Committee, Chase Manhattan Bank, New York, will be introduced by Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark.

600 Enemy Die in Series of Battles

SAIGON (AP) - A series of fierce battles involving American, South Korean and South Vietnamese troops killed nearly 600 Communist soldiers Friday, according to reports today from the combat units.

The U.S. Command in Saigon said the savage fighting had ended a two-week lull in the ground war. Action appeared to have tapered off again today, with only scattered contacts reported.

Two American helicopters were shot down over South Vietnam Friday.

Among the Communist dead was a battalion commander cut down by South Vietnamese troops in a fight on the coastal plains northwest of Hue. The Communist battalion of some 500 men lost 216 killed, 15 prisoners, of whom four were women, and 78 weapons left on the bloody field.

The heaviest American action was northeast of Saigon, where an armored column of the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment was sweeping a main road through Long Khanh Province.

Viet Cong guerrillas set up an ambush as the column came up the road and a two-hour melee followed. The cavalymen lost 15 dead and 60 wounded. The enemy toll was 90 dead and 26 weapons left on the field.

American casualties throughout the country totaled 37 dead and 158 wounded.

Uses Book Royalties for Church

NEW DELHI, India (AP) - James J. Fahey, a garbage truck driver from Waltham, Mass., arrived in India today to dedicate a Roman Catholic church built with royalties from his book "Pacific War Diary," about his experiences as a sailor in World War II.

"It has made me broke but what a wonderful way to go broke," Fahey said of the church to be dedicated Sunday, his 49th birthday, in Mettupatti, a village in Madras State 1,300 miles south of Delhi.

"The pastor of the church and myself will both be as poor as church mice but we'll also be the happiest people in the world," he said.

Fahey has never met the priest, the Rev. S.K. Michael, although the two have corresponded for several years. Fahey heard about Father Michael from a resident on his garbage route.

Fahey's one-week trip to India was financed by Waltham residents.

"If I can leave India with the satisfaction that I've done a little something to help relations between various religions and between Indians and Americans, I'll be happy," he said.

Unconscious Woman Has Baby Girl

BOSTON (AP) - Shirley M. Sweeney, 36, of Somerville has given birth to the baby girl she hoped for but may never know. Mrs. Sweeney has been in a deep coma since February when she suffered a severe brain hemorrhage.

Wednesday physicians at Massachusetts General Hospital helped her deliver a 5-pound 14-ounce baby. They said the baby is healthy and apparently normal in every way, and called her birth a medical rarity.

"A quick check with professors here and in New York revealed no case of a woman comatose so long delivering a healthy child," said Dr. Barry G. Aronson, a neurologist who has cared for Mrs. Sweeney. Francis M. Sweeney, 50, said his new daughter will be named Mary Elizabeth. The Sweeneys have two other children, Joseph, 4, and Paul, 2.

Mrs. Sweeney's mother, Mrs. Arthur Wise, who is caring for the two other children, said her daughter knew she was pregnant before going into the coma and hoped for a girl.
